Interesting Facts for the Week

In addition to being really smart about triangles, Pythagoras had some very strict rules about beans. He developed a sort of cult following and forbade his adherents from eating meat. They were also not allowed to eat beans — or even touch them. Some theorize that Pythagoras' anti-bean stance may have been responsible for his death. The legend goes that Pythagoras was chased toward a bean field. Rather than step on the sacred beans, the mathematician refused to enter the field and was killed by his pursuers.

Leonardo da Vinci wasn't just a Renaissance polymath; he was also super strong. There are even tales of him bending horseshoes just for the fun of it.
