

the Harrold

Week of November 12-17, 2018

Interesting Facts for the Week

Uranus was originally named Georgium Sidus by English astronomer William Herschel when he discovered the planet in 1781, and it went by the name George nearly 70 years after it was initially discovered.

T-shirts were originally marketed for a specific type of man. In 1904, the Cooper Underwear Company marketed T-shirts to single men without sewing skills calling them "bachelor undershirts" using the slogan, "No safety pins — no buttons — no needle — no thread."
