Interesting Facts for the Week

The Erfurt Latrine Disaster (look it up—it's a real thing) was an accident in Erfurt, Duchy of Thuringia, that caused the deaths of at least 60 people in 1184. A number of nobles from across the Holy Roman Empire were meeting in a room at the Church of St. Peter, when their combined weight caused the floor to collapse into the latrine beneath the cellar and led to dozens of nobles drowning in liquid excrement.

Fidel Castro loved milk so much that when his cow who holds the world record for most milk produced in a day died, he had her mounted by a taxidermist, had a marble statue of her built, and a full eulogy and obituary written for her in his state newspaper. Cuban scientists have repeatedly tried (and failed) to clone her. Her name was Ubre Blanca, which means White Udder.

Albert Einstein was offered the presidency of Israel but turned it down.
